Market Commentary

DPLK Generali Money Market Bravo recorded a performance of 0.38% in March 2026. The Indonesian money market remained resilient in March 2026, backed by accommodative liquidity. Bank Indonesia's BI-Rate hold at 4.75% anchored short-term rates and stability. Ample systemic liquidity was supported by steady foreign inflows and calmer global conditions post-Fed tightening. Inflation stayed low within target, with narrow interbank spreads. Interbank activity balanced well, overnight rates stable near policy levels. Corporate funding costs stayed favorable for short-term borrowing. Rupiah deposit rates offered solid yields across tenors. These dynamics ensured smooth money market operations with minimal volatility through Q1 2026.
