Market Commentary

DPLK Generali Money Market Bravo recorded a performance of 0.35% in May 2026. Indonesia's money market in May 2026 was defined by one decisive moment: Bank Indonesia raised its benchmark interest rate by 50 basis points to 5.25%—its first hike in over a year—as the rupiah fell to a historic low near Rp17,700 per US dollar. The move was a direct response to mounting currency pressure driven by Middle East conflict and seasonal demand for US dollars. By raising rates, the central bank aimed to make rupiah-denominated assets more attractive and draw foreign capital back in. Domestic liquidity remained broadly adequate, supported by Bank Indonesia's continued purchases of government bonds throughout the month. While borrowing costs edged higher as a result of the rate hike, the overall money market continued to function in an orderly manner. The central bank signaled that rupiah stability remains the top priority, with rate policy ready to respond further if global pressures persist.
