Market Commentary

Generali Fixed Income Long Duration recorded a performance of -0.04% in July 2026. The Indonesian bond market continued its gradual recovery in July 2026, though with more turbulence beneath the surface. Bank Indonesia held the BI-Rate steady at 5.75%, but the 10-year SBN yield still climbed to 7.29–7.37%, pressured more by persistently high US Treasury yields near 4.69% and renewed hawkish Fed expectations than by domestic policy. The rupiah stayed under sustained pressure, breaching Rp18,000 to close around Rp18,074–18,077 per US dollar, weighing on longer-dated paper even as shorter tenors eased and the curve began normalizing. The ICBI posted a marginal gain, closing at 430.46 (+0.14% MoM), though still down 2.35% year-to-date. Foreign investors remained net buyers of SBN for a second straight month, adding Rp6.39 trillion through July 29, a clear slowdown from June's Rp22.43 trillion, while corporate bonds saw a thin net sell of Rp0.26 trillion. Fiscal conditions offered stability, with the H1 budget deficit contained at Rp196.5 trillion (0.76% of GDP). Sentiment improved overall, but recovery remains tentative and dependent on global rates and the rupiah.
