Market Commentary

Generali Cash Fund recorded a performance of 0.30% in August 2026. Indonesia's money market stabilized further in August 2026 as Bank Indonesia held the BI-Rate at 5.75% for a third consecutive month, pausing after 100bps of cumulative hikes since May to assess their transmission while monitoring rupiah stability and inflation. The rupiah staged its strongest monthly rally in 15 months, appreciating 1.56% to close near Rp17,710 per US dollar, its first monthly gain since February, supported by a weaker US Dollar Index (down 0.49%) and improving risk sentiment, though gains were tempered late in the month by hawkish signals from The Fed. Foreign portfolio inflows into Indonesia reached roughly US$1.8 billion in Q3 through August 14, per BI data. SRBI remained a key liquidity tool, still offering around 7.64% on one-year tenors with outstanding near Rp1,065 trillion, while BI signaled openness to responding more forcefully should external risks, including renewed Fed hawkishness, resurface.
